

Department of English

Position: Assistant Professor, tenure-track, in Multicultural Literature, Ethnic Studies, and related fields, beginning Fall 2010.

Duties: Teaching undergraduate and graduate courses, serving on MA and PhD committees, directing theses and dissertations, some departmental service (e.g., advising, departmental and university committees). Continued publishing in field and other duties commonly associated with holding a university position.

Qualifications:

- PhD in English required.
- Record of scholarly activities and publications
- Teaching Excellence

Salary: Salary competitive.

The University: The University of Louisiana at Lafayette is a selective-admissions, state-supported university of approximately 16,300 undergraduate and graduate students, located in the heart of Louisiana's Acadian-Creole region between Houston and New Orleans. It offers the doctorate in nine areas and Masters' degrees in 27 disciplines. The English graduate program offers the MA and PhD, with concentrations in Literary Studies, Rhetoric, Creative Writing, Folklore, and Linguistics.

Applications: Candidates should initially provide a letter of application, a current curriculum vitae, and names and addresses of three references.

Send to: Professor James McDonald, Department Head
Department of English, UL Lafayette
P.O. Box 44691
Lafayette, LA 70504-4691

A screening committee will begin reviewing applications as they arrive and will continue until the position is filled.

EEO#: LA 3-07